Taylor Jinings - ARRCM

Originally, I came from a small town called Molalla located outside of Portland. I moved to Portland to attend Portland State University and then Pacific University School of Pharmacy. During my IPPE rotations I quickly realized that I wanted to be a hospital pharmacist. I also realized that I wanted to pursue PGY1 residency to further develop my clinical knowledge. The Asante residency program interested me because it has a large variety of rotations available and everyone who had experience at Asante told me that the culture at the hospital was great. Now as a resident I can confirm that the culture is friendly and encourages learning. My primary interests are infectious disease, critical care and teaching. My resident project revolves around training for sterile compounding. In my free time I like to play guitar and look for coins to add to my collection.

Karl Reymundo - ARRCM

I was born and raised in the Philippines but immigrated to Texas when I was thirteen years old. I came from a family of healthcare workers (pharmacist, nurses and physician assistant) which inspired me to choose pharmacy as a career. I attended Texas Tech University for pharmacy school. During my time there, I decided to pursue residency when I realized I wanted to hone my clinical skills in oncology, internal medicine and informatics. When searching for residency programs, I was specifically seeking for locations outside of Texas as I wanted to gain a different perspective on pharmacy practice. I applied to Asante due to offering a wide variety of rotations that fit my interests. I was able to speak with current residents during ASHP midyear and this solidified my residency selection. My residency project revolves around implementation of USP 800. In my free time I enjoy hiking, watching movies, playing video games, traveling and exploring different cuisines.

Morgan Garlington - ARRCM

Originally a Texan, I completed my undergraduate degree at Texas State University before taking 5 years off to figure out my true career passions. I became a pharmacy technician, knowing I wanted to eventually be in healthcare. During this time, I discovered my love for pharmacy and patient care which led me to the University of Colorado for pharmacy school. By my final year, I knew that completing a residency was the next career step for me. I explored programs across the U.S., looking for one that boasted a staff that was welcoming and eager to help residents further their career, as well as offered clinical rotations encompassing my areas of interest (ie. Critical care, infectious disease, administrative/leadership). The program at Asante offered a well-rounded variety of clinical experiences that fit my areas of interest and my interaction with them at ASHP Midyear really sealed the deal! The amazing pharmacy team and the daily growth of my clinical knowledge and skills continually make me thankful that I chose Asante for my experience. In my free time I enjoy exploring the outdoors in Southern Oregon. I have trips planned to snowboard Mount Hood and visit the redwoods in the spring.

Anna White - ATRMC

I am originally native to New York, where I grew up on a 100-acre farm with my parents and four siblings. I have wanted to be a pharmacist since I was 8 years old so after I graduated high school I attended an accelerated PharmD program in Albany, New York. I applied to the Asante residency program at Three Rivers Medical Center because the program truly spoke to me. After interviewing I knew this was the program I had to attend and luckily, I matched. I aspire to make a deep impact within the healthcare system as an advocate for quality patient care. My research project will include researching and developing a policy/procedure for emergency preparedness and disaster management regarding a Cascadia Rising event that can be implemented system wide. I enjoy hiking, cooking with my partner, painting, cuddling our two cats, Caper and Onion, and reading when I can.

Ashley Oropeza – ARRCM

I was born and raised in the small town of Corning, CA. After receiving my bachelor degrees in Cellular and Molecular Biology I moved to Portland, OR for pharmacy school at Pacific University. I applied to Asante after hearing a lot about the experience of my roommate here as an APPE student. It made me feel that I would have more opportunities for new learning experiences. Currently my career interests are in infectious disease and critical care. My current residency project is focused on pharmacist intervention on patients with documented beta-lactam allergies and assessing the risk of the patient having a true allergy. In my spare time, I enjoy playing video games, arts and crafts and exploring.
